UNIQUE ACCESS

We provide investors with unique access to attractive investment opportunities in emerging markets across the world.

We invest alongside IFC in high-potential companies and infrastructure projects across Latin America & the Caribbean, Africa, the Middle East, Eastern Europe, and Asia.

HIGH-QUALITY INVESTORS

We are proud to invest on behalf of 57 high-quality investors, giving them access to attractive investment opportunities and sharing our emerging markets knowledge and insights.

We invest through a range of regional, sectoral, and fund of funds on behalf of our investors, which include leading sovereign wealth funds, pension funds, and development finance institutions.

STRONG RETURNS AND IMPACT

IFC, our owner and co-investor, has been achieving superior financial results alongside strong development impact for six decades.

The capital we invest generates financial returns for our investors and magnifies the development impact of IFC's own investments, improving the lives of millions of people who live and work in emerging market countries.

ON THE GROUND

When evaluating emerging market investment opportunities, having a strong local presence really matters. It also helps us mitigate risks and support portfolio companies after we have invested.

Our relationship with IFC gives us access to a pipeline of opportunities generated by IFC's 3,900-person team in 100 offices across the developing world.

A DISCIPLINED PROCESS

Our disciplined and rigorous decision-making process ensures we are strategic, thoughtful, and deliberate—attributes that serve our investors well.

Each of our funds has a dedicated investment team with fiduciary responsibility to the fund it is managing. We make all investment and portfolio decisions for the benefit of our investors.

“Our relationship with IFC’s 3,900-strong team and its unparalleled footprint of 100 offices across the developing world gives us access to a pipeline of opportunities that generates impact and returns.”

Working together,
delivering more

At IFC, we work to create thriving markets around the world. We know that these markets produce strong companies, generate jobs, and lift people out of poverty. We also know that investors are eager to participate in the tremendous growth opportunities that emerging market economies offer. Because the world's development challenges are larger than any one organization can cover using only its own resources, it is critical that both public and private sector investors partner to address these challenges.

That is why we created IFC Asset Management Company in 2009. AMC leverages IFC's global footprint, network, and market access to originate attractive investment opportunities for third-party investors. As the primary mobilization platform for IFC's equity investments, AMC's goal is to invest institutional capital alongside equity commitments made from IFC's balance sheet—in ways that maximize development impact and provide good returns for investors. AMC has attracted new investors to emerging markets and provided a positive example to the wider investment world.

In less than a decade, AMC has raised more than $10 billion, out of which $7.8 billion came from investors other than IFC. It has deployed over $6.3 billion alongside IFC in more than 100 companies and funds. These achievements are testament to the hard work of both the IFC and AMC teams.

A BOLD COMMITMENT

In April 2018, IFC's shareholders unanimously endorsed a $5.5 billion capital increase. This capital increase will more than triple IFC's cumulative paid-in capital received since inception. In addition, our shareholders agreed to suspend IFC net income transfers to the International Development Association (IDA). As a result, we will have $9.2 billion extra capital available to support IFC operations.

This funding will allow IFC to do more, particularly in hard-to-reach places or fragile and conflict-afflicted areas. By 2030, our ambitious IFC 3.0 strategy aims to invest $25 billion a year from our own balance sheet and an additional $23 billion from third-party investors—for a total of $48 billion. This will more than double the $23.3 billion invested in the fiscal year that ended June 30, 2018.

The capital increase is a key step toward achieving our investment goals by 2030, but it will require a corresponding increase in mobilization of third-party capital to be successful. The capital we raise from third parties—whether through debt syndication or AMC's equity funds—will be just as critical. Together, this new IFC and third-party capital will allow us to magnify our work to create and strengthen markets.

A UNIQUE PLATFORM

IFC and AMC have a great deal to offer these investors. Investors in AMC funds benefit from the unique investment platform IFC has built over more than six decades. This includes an investment pipeline generated by IFC's network of more than 100 local offices and thousands of experienced employees, half of whom work in the offices in developing countries. In many cases, there is no other way for investors to gain access to the type of transactions IFC specializes in.

Moreover, the broad range of AMC funds enables investors to choose regions or sectors that best suit their investment needs. Finally, investors benefit from the impact-investing features of IFC's work: all of AMC's investments adhere to IFC's strict environmental and social standards, and all of them seek to achieve measurable development impact.

There is much work to do. But I have full confidence in the AMC team to help us make progress against our 2030 goals. I'm delighted to work with Marcos Brujis, the CEO of AMC, and the AMC team to advance IFC's ambition to end extreme poverty by 2030 and boost shared prosperity, while also delivering financial returns for AMC's investors.

$5.5bn

IFC capital increase

A new chapter

For AMC, 2017 was full of progress and transition. During the year, we committed $255 million to 11 new and five follow-on investments. We now have a diverse portfolio of more than 100 investments, representing 69 countries and all IFC sectors.

We also had a strong focus on creating and realizing value in our portfolios. Although our overall portfolio remains young – the average holding period at the end of 2017 was just 3.6 years – we continue to demonstrate our ability to generate a financial return on the capital we invest. AMC fully exited seven investments during the year and returned more than $469 million to our investors. This takes AMC's cumulative capital returned to investors since inception past $1.8 billion.

Our financial returns come alongside the development impact of our investments. These investments are connecting communities to clean water in Latin America, funding female entrepreneurs in Africa, and supplying raw materials to build vital infrastructure projects in post-conflict states in Asia.

A FOCUS ON EXITS

With more than $6 billion committed to date, a number of our funds have reached, or are reaching, maturity. The IFC Capitalization Fund and the IFC African, Latin American & Caribbean Fund completed their investment periods two years ago and are now firmly in harvesting mode. Both funds had strong exits in 2017.

The Women Entrepreneurs Debt Fund – an initiative of the Women Entrepreneurs Opportunity Facility, a partnership established in 2014 between IFC and Goldman Sachs 10,000 Women – achieved a final close in early 2017. It is already more than 75% committed and has a strong portfolio. The IFC Catalyst Fund – established in 2012 to provide capital for low-carbon power generation and energy efficiency – also approached a commitment level of 80% during 2017.

We will remain focused on returning capital to investors throughout 2018 and 2019.

A UNIQUE ADVANTAGE

The case for investing in emerging markets remains compelling. Strong demographics, increased urbanization and infrastructure needs, and the growth of the middle class create a range of exciting investment opportunities. However, emerging markets are volatile. Geopolitical risk and currency volatility require us to exercise caution regarding the size and timing of our investments. In addition, exit windows, when they do open, may not stay open for very long.

With experience and knowledge, this volatility and uncertainty also creates opportunity. AMC benefits from IFC's 60 years of experience investing in emerging markets. IFC's 3,900-strong team gives us deep industry knowledge and unrivalled insight into the economic and political environments in which we invest.

Most importantly, IFC provides access to a local presence and resources in almost every country we invest in. This gives us the confidence to invest ahead of the rest of the market, often in challenging environments. In 2017, AMC made new investments in a cement producer in Myanmar and in two Cambodian banks. We more than doubled our investment on the part-sale of our shareholding in Bank South Pacific in Papua New Guinea, and supported the IPO process of Bandhan Bank, a microfinance institution that is now India's fastest growing commercial bank. We invest regularly in opportunities that investors would be unable to access by any other means.

A VITAL PARTNERSHIP

The emerging markets opportunity – and the vital partnership between IFC and AMC – compelled me to rejoin AMC as CEO at the end of 2017. Having worked for both organizations, I was excited by what AMC had achieved to date and saw the potential to enhance our performance for investors—by further developing the effectiveness of the relationship between IFC and AMC.

I am convinced that this partnership will deliver a strong development impact and generate attractive returns. A year later as CEO, I've already witnessed positive developments. For example, AMC and IFC teams are now collaborating more closely on origination and execution to source more and better transactions.

With more than $2.6 billion in dry powder and an improving pipeline of investible opportunities, now is a great time for AMC, our funds, and our investors.

FUNDING THE FUTURE

In early 2018, IFC received approval for a $5.5 billion capital increase. This is terrific news for both IFC and AMC.

The capital increase will allow IFC to be more active, giving AMC more deals to choose from, and creating more opportunities in a greater number of countries.

As part of the capital increase, there's also a greater commitment to mobilizing third-party funds to invest alongside IFC. IFC is targeting 90 cents of third-party capital for every dollar invested from its own balance sheet, up from around 70 cents currently.

As the World Bank Group's primary means of mobilizing equity investment, AMC has an important role to play in delivering on these commitments.

COMMITTED TO IMPACT

The capital AMC invests generates financial returns for investors and magnifies the development impact of IFC's own investment commitments. In this way, our investments are improving the lives of millions of people who live and work in emerging market countries.

In 2017 IFC launched a new project impact assessment tool: Anticipated Impact Measurement and Monitoring (AIMM). IFC has measured the impact of its projects and investments for many years, but it continues to evolve and develop stronger systems. Now, under the new AIMM system, IFC and AMC measure the expected impact of all new investments as part of the due diligence process. I believe this is now one of the most comprehensive impact measuring and monitoring systems in use today.

AN IMPORTANT VOICE

By continuing to safeguard our investors' capital and work side-by-side with IFC, we believe we can attract many more investors to emerging markets. The possibilities for these investors, and for a meaningful impact in developing countries, are exciting.

I am grateful for the warm welcome I received from AMC staff and our investors, and I'm pleased by the progress we have made during my first year as CEO. It is great to be working alongside AMC's talented team of global professionals.

Thank you to all our portfolio companies and investors for your innovation, collaboration, and continued support.

Case study: ALTÁN Redes

Connecting Mexico

ALTAN Redes is developing the Red Compartida (“Shared Network”) wholesale telecommunications project in Mexico that is bringing next-generation wireless connectivity to over 92% of the Mexican population.

THE COMPANY

ALTÁN Redes was created in 2016 to design, implement, operate, and maintain Red Compartida, a new wireless network in Mexico. The project will provide access to one of the most advanced high-speed voice and data networks in the world for 110 million of Mexico’s 127 million people. This access will include even remote areas where there has not previously been cell phone or internet coverage.

Mexico’s 2014 constitutional reform established internet access as a universal right. It laid the foundations for a more competitive telecommunications sector with the goal of benefiting Mexican consumers and businesses.

The reforms required the Mexican telecommunications regulator to establish a 4G wholesale-only wireless network that would sell mobile network capacity to third parties. In 2015, the regulator announced the Red Compartida initiative and started an international bidding process.

THE TRANSACTION

ALTÁN Redes – a consortium of international and domestic financial investors, local industrial investors, and telecoms equipment providers – was awarded the license to execute the Red Compartida project in late 2016. Together China-Mexico Fund and IFC committed $205 million to ALTÁN Redes in October of that year.

Deployment work began at the start of 2017, and the network launched in March 2018 with 32% coverage—slightly ahead of minimum coverage obligations. It is expected to increase coverage to 50% of the population by mid 2019, more than six months ahead of schedule. Initial operational tests conducted at the end of 2017 recorded high broadband speeds more than 4.0x faster than its main competitors.

ALTÁN Redes is expected to complete full roll-out of the network to the targeted 92% of the population by 2023.

THE IMPACT

Despite being the second-largest economy in Latin America, Mexico’s telecom sector has suffered from years of underinvestment and underdevelopment. Low domestic competition has led to high tariffs and low coverage. The result is very low mobile and broadband penetration levels—Mexico ranked 16th of 17 countries in Latin America in access levels in 2016.

Red Compartida’s wholesale-only network will increase the coverage, capacity, quality, and speed of broadband services across Mexico.

The project will drive strong growth in wireless broadband services in Mexico, where total data usage is forecast to increase at a CAGR of 51% from 2015 to 2020. This should create employment opportunities, increase foreign and domestic investment, and support small and medium enterprise growth. It will also encourage new entrants to the telecoms market, resulting in wider coverage, lower prices, and better service for millions of Mexicans.

“This is the most important telecoms project in Mexico’s history. It’s fantastic to have the support of both IFC and the China-Mexico Fund team as we transform the country’s wireless network capabilities.”

CESAR URREA
HEAD, CHINA-MEXICO FUND

“This seven-year, $7 billion project is only possible because of determined government action in Mexico—encompassing new laws, a new regulatory framework, and widespread infrastructure sharing. It will deliver massive benefits to ordinary Mexicans who have suffered from years of poor coverage and high prices. It will also help small and medium enterprises and entrepreneurs thrive, and it will increase the attractiveness of Mexico to international and domestic investors.”

Case study: Lekela

Powering Africa

Lekela is developing wind and solar projects to bring clean power to millions of Africans.

THE COMPANY

Lekela is a renewable power generation company operating in Africa. Its current projects in Egypt, Ghana, South Africa, and Senegal will eventually supply more than 1,300 MW of electricity—providing much needed clean energy to communities across Africa.

Lekela was founded in 2015 by Mainstream Renewable Power, an independent developer of renewable energy with a proven track record of building large utility-scale platforms in Asia and Latin America. With support from a financial sponsor, Lekela planned to apply Mainstream's experience in project finance, grid dynamics, wind and solar supply, and risk mitigation to create a major pan-African renewable energy platform.

Lekela's first wind farm – an 80 MW project in South Africa – began to generate electricity in 2016. Two further projects totaling 280 MW were completed in South Africa in 2017. Three projects are currently under construction, including the Taiba N'Diaye wind farm, which will be the first ever utility-scale wind farm in Senegal once phase 1 construction finishes at the end of 2018. The company also has early-stage development projects in Ghana and Egypt.

THE TRANSACTION

In June 2016, IFC Catalyst Fund and IFC African, Latin American and Caribbean Fund committed $22.5 million and $15 million, respectively, to Lekela. IFC also invested $22.5 million from its balance sheet. This equity investment has fueled the expansion of the Lekela platform.

Since the investment, Lekela has assembled an experienced management team, built a pipeline of new solar and wind opportunities, and started construction on projects in South Africa and Senegal. These projects will add more than 400 MW of generating capacity.

The IFC team, including industry specialists and country managers, has provided support to the Lekela team on grid strategy. AMC has also helped shape its asset portfolio to make it attractive to utility-scale buyers, and it has given strategic advice on potential exit options.

THE IMPACT

Africa is a challenging market for large renewables projects because few of its countries offer the stable regulatory environment necessary to support them. Nevertheless, with the continent's rapidly growing electricity needs, it is expected that renewable energy will play an important role.

Lekela's three operational projects in South Africa generate enough power for more than 300,000 South African homes and offset around 1.4 million tons of carbon emissions from traditional fossil fuel plants. In several other African countries, renewable energy reduces reliance on imported fossil fuels, lowering both costs and exposure to volatile commodity markets.

Lekela works closely with local communities to further socio-economic and economic development initiatives in the local area.

PROGRESS

Powerful progress at Summit

IFC Emerging Asia Fund portfolio company Summit Power International signed a Memorandum of Understanding with GE and Excelerate Energy to develop a $1 billion gas-to-power generation plant and offshore LNG import terminal in Bangladesh. Summit is the largest independent power producer in Bangladesh and accounted for more than 20% of the private power market in 2017. Bangladesh is a fast-growing country with significant energy, power, and technology needs, and many Bangladeshis lack access to grid-connected electricity. Total power generation will need to more than double, to 34 GW, by 2030 if the country is to sustain its economic growth, which is currently running at around 7%.

PROGRESS

Strong growth and IPO preparations at Bandhan Bank

Bandhan Bank is India's fastest-growing commercial bank and the country's largest microfinance institution. It provides financial products and services to more than 13 million people, including many from some of India's most underbanked regions.

IFC Financial Institutions Growth Fund invested in Bandhan in April 2016, providing capital to support the bank's expansion strategy and continue its record of delivering double-digit annual growth. Bandhan's network has expanded rapidly and it now has more than 900 bank branches, almost 500 ATMs, and around 2,750 doorstep service centers.

In 2017, Bandhan started to prepare for an IPO so that it could attract new investors and fulfill one of the conditions imposed by the Reserve Bank of India when it granted Bandhan a banking license in 2015.

India is home to more than one-third of the world's unbanked population. By focusing on the financial needs of people who have traditionally been overlooked by the formal banking system, Bandhan plays a crucial role in achieving India's and the World Bank's financial inclusion targets. Bandhan currently has a 20% market share of India's microfinance business.

In March 2018, Bandhan successfully achieved an IPO on both the BSE and NSE. At IPO, IFC Financial Institutions Fund sold approximately 40% of its shareholding in Bandhan.

CHANDRA SHEKHAR GHOSH
FOUNDER & CEO, BANDHAN BANK

“Having IFC and AMC as anchor investors was helpful for Bandhan in building investor confidence ahead of our stock market listing. The proceeds from our successful IPO will enable Bandhan to continue the rapid growth of our microfinance business – which accounted for 88% of all advances in 2017 – and support the expansion of our non-microfinance activities, such as providing funding for micro, small, and medium enterprises (MSMEs) and affordable homes.”

TIM KRAUSE
CO-HEAD, FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS FUNDS

“The IPO in March 2018 was more than 14 times oversubscribed. This enabled our fund to sell part of its shareholding and generate strong positive returns for our investors, while retaining a significant stake in the business. The IPO is another chapter in the incredible story of Bandhan, and we look forward to working with the company as it continues to expand across India.”

Case study: Shwe Taung Cement

Building Myanmar

With support from IFC and AMC, Shwe Taung Cement will more than triple cement production—creating new jobs and providing vital building material to meet Myanmar’s significant infrastructure needs.

THE COMPANY

Shwe Taung Cement Company (STC) is the fifth-largest cement manufacturer and the biggest supplier of ready-mixed concrete in Myanmar. It is majority-owned by Shwe Taung Group, one of the country’s largest conglomerates, with businesses in real estate, construction, building materials, retail, and financial services. The group employs more than 6,000 people across Myanmar and supports thousands more across its broader supply chain.

STC is strategically competitive thanks to its central Myanmar location and its integrated mining operations, which give it control of raw materials such as limestone. The company benefits from production costs that allow it to vie favorably against domestic and foreign manufacturers—and gain market share from them.

THE TRANSACTION

IFC Emerging Asia Fund committed $20 million to STC in August 2017. IFC invested $15 million alongside the fund and provided $40 million of debt financing, for a total funding package of $75 million.

The capital is being used to increase cement production by more than 200%. The company will increase clinker capacity from 1,500 tons per day (tpd) to 5,500 tpd, and grinding capacity from 2,800 tpd to 7,200 tpd. Started at the end of 2017, the expansion project is expected to be completed in Q2 2019.

THE IMPACT

Myanmar has one of the lowest per capita cement consumption rates in Asia, but it is among the fastest-growing cement markets in the region. From 2009 to 2014, cement demand tripled. With GDP growth forecast to grow 6.7%, 6.9%, and 7.1% over the next three years to 2020, the country has a significant infrastructure need that will require continued major increases in building materials such as cement and concrete. From now until 2020, cement demand is expected to grow 10–15% annually.

The production expansion will allow STC to meet Myanmar’s strong domestic need, while creating around 1,000 direct and indirect jobs. The expansion of STC will reduce the country’s reliance on imports – currently about two-thirds of Myanmar’s cement needs – and help to reduce the overall cost, which is driven up by high logistics costs.

Support from IFC and AMC is helping STC embed strong corporate governance practices and the best international environmental and social standards. IFC and AMC are also working with STC to implement new accounting and resource management systems to improve efficiency. These improvements will reduce the environmental impact of STC’s operations on a per ton basis. Collectively, these initiatives demonstrate that it is possible to achieve rapid growth while making significant environmental, social, and governance improvements. This, in turn, has the potential to broadly influence the industry by sending an important message to other operators in the cement and building materials industries.

Investment with impact

For decades, IFC has been a leader in measuring private sector development results and setting corporate targets for direct development impact. As IFC's partner, AMC invests to achieve these same targets.

By mobilizing third-party capital to invest alongside IFC's investment, AMC magnifies the impact of IFC's own capital—resulting in larger investments and greater impact. Since 2009, AMC funds have invested $6.1 billion in more than 100 companies and funds in 69 countries.

AMC – working with IFC – helps to create markets that attract other private sector investors. AMC's and IFC's investments work to improve regulatory frameworks to encourage the establishment of more businesses, and they help demonstrate successful, replicable business models.

AMC and IFC measure and monitor investments according to IFC's rigorous Policy on Social & Environmental Sustainability, as well as according to an integrated development measurement system that links institutional goals to specific development results. IFC was the first development finance institution to report current development results across its entire portfolio. IFC's analysis of its portfolio shows that companies that are well managed and achieve their impact targets are also likely to be profitable.

MEASURING IMPACT

AMC is fortunate to sit at the intersection of IFC – one of the most experienced impact investors – and some of the largest institutional and private investors in the world. Investing alongside IFC means impact is in our DNA and every investment we make targets a development impact.

In coordination with IFC, AMC's process incorporates the following:

- Diagnostics to identify the needs of the private sector in specific countries and sectors, and to develop targeted investment priorities
- Assessment of anticipated development impact
- Monitoring of operational project results
- Evaluation of mature projects to identify impacts achieved and lessons learned

In 2018, IFC introduced a new project impact assessment tool: the Anticipated Impact Measurement and Monitoring (AIMM) system. Using AIMM, IFC and AMC investment staff are able to anticipate and measure the direct impact of investments and their impacts on market creation. It focuses on how employees, customers, suppliers, and other relevant parties are affected, as well as broader impacts on the economy and society. With an even clearer idea from the outset of the anticipated impact, IFC and AMC can better anticipate the potential risks and opportunities for a business.

AMC is one of the first asset managers to adopt these new impact measurement tools and reporting. We hope that our strong relationships with leading investors will allow opportunities for AMC to support these institutions as they develop and refine their own impact assessment and measurement processes.

“AMC is fortunate to sit at the intersection of IFC and some of the largest institutional and private investors in the world.”

Team and governance

AMC aspires to the highest levels of governance at both the fund and fund manager level. Our Board, our committee structure, and the policies and procedures we have developed ensure that we meet this standard and deliver on our commitments.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

AMC's Board of Directors is comprised of five members: the CEO of IFC (Philippe Le Houérou), the CEO of AMC (Marcos Brujís), both ex-officio members, and three Independent Directors, who form a majority of the Board (Guy de Chazal, Robert Pozen, and Hilda Ochoa-Brillembourg).

Chaired by the IFC CEO, the Board is responsible for oversight of AMC's operations, finances, and conflicts management.

AUDIT COMMITTEE

The independent members of the Board form the Audit Committee, which assists the Board in fulfilling its oversight responsibilities for the integrity of AMC's financial statements, the independent auditor's qualifications, and the performance of the independent auditor.

CONFLICTS MANAGEMENT

AMC has established best-in-class procedures for handling actual and potential conflicts of interest between AMC-managed funds, or between IFC- and AMC-managed funds.

The independent members of the AMC Board form the Conflicts Committee, which reviews how conflicts of interest are managed, including the steps taken to mitigate such conflicts. The committee provides regular updates to the Board of Directors.

The Advisory Committee of each fund also approves how conflicts are managed in every relevant transaction. It is only after approvals from both committees that AMC can proceed with a transaction.

RELATIONSHIP WITH IFC

Each AMC fund has entered into a support services agreement and a co-investment agreement with IFC. Under the support services agreement, IFC provides investment sourcing services, as well as support in investment processing and portfolio management. This ensures access to IFC's sector and country expertise, and to its specialists in environmental, social, and governance matters.

The co-investment agreement defines the allocation of investment opportunities between IFC and the respective AMC fund, thereby ensuring access to IFC's pipeline on a pre-agreed basis.

AMC investment teams work closely with IFC colleagues to identify, appraise, structure, and negotiate transactions. They then work closely together to manage the resulting portfolios for their respective funds actively.

AMC invests in accordance with IFC's Environmental and Social Performance Standards.

INVESTMENT COMMITTEES

AMC funds are managed by dedicated AMC teams. The decision to participate in any investment opportunity is made independently by the Investment Committee of each fund. The Investment Committees include senior members of AMC, and AMC's CEO chairs each one.

ADVISORY COMMITTEES

Each fund has its own Advisory Committee, formed to act in an advisory capacity to the fund and to review any potential investment-related conflict situations. The representatives on these committees are appointed from the major investors in each fund.

Experienced senior team

AMC is led by a diverse team with many decades of emerging markets investing experience. Its professionals have extensive private-sector investment expertise, industry knowledge, and country-specific understanding. Team members have come from the private sector and from IFC—creating a unique group that benefits from IFC’s knowledge, relationships, and track record to meet the expectations of AMC’s investors.
